Rosedale Paving

Spotlight on Business

By Mark Arike

Rosedale Paving Specializes in Driveways, Parking Lots, Tennis Courts and More

Keeping a business running for 33 years is quite an accomplishment. Dedication, great service and a commitment to customer satisfaction are all key components to gaining new customers and ensuring that previous ones return.

Rosedale Paving of Fenelon Falls is one of these companies.

Its owner, Vic Perreault, along with his wife Sharon and sons David, Kevin and Stephen, have been the driving forces behind the paving business that is currently thriving even in the midst of the recession.

For Vic, it all began when he was only 18 years old.

"I just went and applied with a friend of mine," he said in an interview of his introduction to the paving business.

He worked for a couple of these companies, in various positions, before he made the brave move to start his own enterprise.

Prior to making the move and getting Rosedale Paving off the ground, he worked for a company named Law Construction. Most of the jobs that he held while with the company required lots of travel. That meant Vic had to spend time away from home. He decided it was time for a change of scenery.

"I became sick of working away from home," explained Perreault. "I wanted something that the boys could get into doing."

In the fall of 1964 Vic moved his family to the Fenelon Falls area. One of the first projects he worked on in the Kawartha's was on the road construction of Cty Rd. #8, between Fenelon Falls and Bobcaygeon.

But how did Rosedale Paving come to be, you might be thinking to yourself?

First, Vic put out a survey in the area to ensure that there would be a market for his services. Once he discovered that there indeed was a demand, Vic purchased a paving company that was started up one year earlier by two cousins from Woodville. To this day one of them continues to work for Vic since the buyout occurred. Vic turned that business into Rosedale.

The first project he completed, as owner of Rosedale Paving was a private driveway, which he says still exists to this day with only a few minor cracks on it. One of his first, large-scale projects was at Victoria Place, a retirement development in Bobcaygeon.

Vic commends everyone in his family for the integral roles they have played in the business over the many years. His wife Sharon used to be the secretary, and now answers the phones at home occasionally when business calls come. His sons, who range in age from 36-41, work on projects and are set to take over the business once their dad retires.

"Kevin looks after the grading preparation, Stephen looks after the paving and David Perreault looks after the estimating," Perreault pointed out.

Business for Rosedale paving in the early days took-off once the word spread around. Between 1977 and 1987, Perreault says that Rosedale paved about 200 driveways.

At Rosedale, you'll find a number of services available.

"We take care of excavating, grading, the full construction of driveways; parking lots, tennis courts...said Perreault. "We also provide snowplowing and sand for winter."

Most projects that Rosedale completes come in at around $5,000, says Perreault, but some cost as little $500 and others can go up in the $100,000 range.

The line-up of expensive equipment used to complete the jobs consists of tandem dump trucks, graders, loader, skid steer, excavator, asphalt paving machine and more.

Now that the summer season is upon us, Perreault says that business is really starting to pick up.

"We're usually booked up in two months in advance," he said.

And though Rosedale Paving is located in Fenelon Falls, that doesn't mean they're limited to serving only that area.

"We serve other areas, such as Peterborough, as a sub-contractor for Van de Bor Paving," explained Perreault.

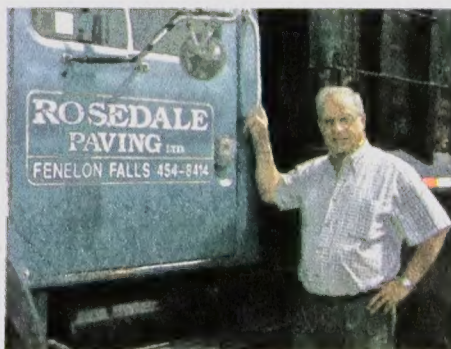

Rosedale also serves Haliburton County. Areas they have worked on in the past have included paving in front of Haliburton's 4C's building and work at the Dysart et al municipal building. Rosedale is currently working on paving projects at the Echo Hills apartments in Haliburton and the new library on York St.

What separates a good paving job from a poor one? Perreault says there are a number of factors.

"We put in the proper foundation in the preparation of the sight and we don't lie about the thickness of the asphalt. There's also the workmanship that goes into the surface," he explained.

Often times, Rosedale has had to go redo a job that was done badly the first time around, many of which were carried out by "fly-by-nighters".

"We've had to go in, rip some of the paving jobs out and do it all over again. So, say someone paid $5,000 to have it done, when we come in and have to redo it, they've spent almost double that initial amount," said Perreault.

Fly-by-night paving companies typically show up at a person's doorstep unexpectedly. They offer to complete a paving job for the customer at a fraction of the price of the legitimate competition in town, just to do the job incorrectly. These driveways are usually paved unevenly, develop cracks in the asphalt, are less than half the three-inch thickness promised, and those that are graded poorly prevent water from draining down to the street.

These paving companies move from town-to-town quickly, so tracking them down to recoup your losses is next to impossible.

Doing a good job correctly the first time around is something that is of the utmost importance to Perreault and his employees.

"We've been around here for over 30 years so doing a job right is crucial when you're striving to be number one," he said.

If you're interested in using the professional services of Rosedale Paving, simply call 705 454-8414. Rosedale will come out within a week or two to provide you with a free estimate.

Also, if you're a skilled asphalt raker, or know someone else who is, give Vic a call. He is looking to hire someone to take on this skilled position. □

The Work of Otis Tamasaukas at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery

Well Respected Artist Brings Together Found Artifacts With Prints to Explore Interior Landscapes

Otis Tamasaukas refuses to remain within the conventional confines of printmaking, choosing instead to experiment with collage as a means of developing rich textural surfaces.

From Thursday, June 4 – Tuesday, June 30, the rich work of Tamasaukas will be on exhibit at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery in Minden. The opening reception for the exhibit will be held on Friday, June 5 at 4 p.m. at the gallery. For more information call Laurie Carmount at 705 286-3763.

More About Otis Tamasaukas

Otis Tamasaukas was born in Terschenreuth Germany in a displaced persons camp in 1947, following his parents' flight from Lithuania after the Russian communist occupation.

Tamasaukas brings together found artifacts, integrating objects such as pelts, clumps of horsehair, and wood panels with his prints in order to explore interior landscapes. His prints operate on an abstract level as wall art, but closely viewed they reveal themselves as Jungian in construction: the Aberdeen Series is a refinement of the self-referential veil-of-ink motif' (Deirdre Hanna, 1986).

Moreover, his integration of found objects into the prints enhances the connection between his art and the real world. There is also, for him, a relationship between the art he has undertaken and his experience with Lithuanian design. Tamasaukas's interest in Lithuanian folk art began as a child, when he traced Lithuanian symbols in books on Lithuanian folk art and design.

"When I made my first print," he has written, "I knew this was it, it was what I wanted to do, in life. I guess, the idea of being able to use a plate, or block; print it many times, side by side, sequential images provided a vicarious explanation of obsessive patterns that reoccur in Lithuanian folk art, and design, relating to my early visual experiences" (1998).

Tamasaukas refuses to remain within the conventional confines of printmaking, choosing instead to experiment with collage as a means of developing rich textural surfaces. Both Trout and Orchid (1980) and Shorebird P.E.I. (1980) combine lithography with collage to create a dynamic printed surface that escapes the often static nature of traditional printmaking.

In Ancient Tree - Balancing River Series #12 (1993), Tamasaukas uses sheets of metal and carved wood nailed to board, as well as printing on paper, conveying the tree through material as well as imagery. His prints undergo numerous phases, each phase infusing the work with a different quality that enhances the overall design, colour and texture. He feels "there is an intimacy with paper which allows an artist to communicate a brief passage or a fleeting idea which is too fragile to convey with a big canvas or masonite or any other structural material" (1981).

Tamasaukas was Master Printer and Director of Etching at Open Studio in Toronto and has taught printmaking at McMaster University in Hamilton (1978 to 1980), Scarborough College, University of Toronto (1978 to 1983), and Queen's University in Kingston (1980 to present).

WOW, Can you believe it has been one year since 1st Choice opened its doors for business in the Haliburton Area?

1st Choice Appliance Repairs in Haliburton is servicing all major brand appliances, as well as lawn and garden machinery. Since its opening, 1st Choice Appliance Repairs has expanded into areas as far as Powassan and is still continuing to grow. Some signs of growth since the starting of 1st Choice Appliance Repairs are their easily accessible website where you can schedule appointments and retrieve promotional information. 1st Choice Appliance Repairs is owned and operated by Martin and Angela Russell.

The Russell's also own the Haliburton Sears store which they have been running for seven years and have extensive experience in customer service. "Before settling into Haliburton, I also owned and operated my own grocery store leaving me with the understanding of how important it is to deliver quality services."

"My wife Angela and I realized that Haliburton is constantly growing, and with the growth there is an increased demand for services. Everybody has a fridge, stove, and microwave, after all." With the demand for appliance repairs, the Russell's decided that the time was ripe for a new appliance repair company.

Martin made an agreement with Sears Canada and became responsible for a very large area. In mid may of last year, 1st Choice Appliance Repairs began servicing appliances from Bancroft over to Bala, and from Wasago up to Powassan. "I also have arrangements with other retailers, such as Leons and Home Depot. There is such a need for these services that when I approached Leons in Bracebridge they were like 'Oh my god! We need you!' 1st Choice Appliance Repairs is an independent corporation. "We service anyone's appliances, regardless of when or where you've purchased your appliance; we will fix it for you."

Currently, Martin has several technicians working for him. "I have a very experienced group of technicians. There's Gary Johnson, who has more than 30 years experience and services the Bracebridge, Gravenhurst area. Grant Russell, who specializes in electronics and completed his appliance training, services the Huntsville, Bracebridge area. Jared Hiebert, who also specializes in electronics, is currently completing his appliance training and services the Huntsville, Burks Falls area. Don Kay, who also has more than 30 years experience and services Sundridge, Powassan area. John Johnson, who has more than 30 years experience, services the Huntsville, and Haliburton area. I also have my lawn and garden technicians, Michael Dennison and Jay Gould who both have more than 6 years experience and service the Bracebridge, Huntsville, and Haliburton area."

One of the best elements of 1st Choice Appliance Repairs is that it is completely mobile. "All of our technicians come to you when you need it. You don't need to come to us. We've driven down all the back roads, from Bancroft to Bala. It doesn't matter how far back you are. Aside from being mobile, 1st Choice Appliance Repairs also does emergency calls. "We've quickly come to realize that you sometimes need to work weekends in this job."

Although Martin has a staff of technicians, he wants more. "I am constantly recruiting more technicians. It's a big territory, so I need people to man it. "I'm very careful with who I hire. It's based on education, experience and attitude. I am determined to quality, best price, and best service. If we haven't provided that, we haven't given 100%. I treat the customers the way they want to be treated."

offer the best So far the business has been very successful, with only a few small bumps. "One of the biggest problems we've had is finding people's houses. It's a big county, and with recent 911 changes, and different road names, it can be a bit difficult. Finding cottages on those back roads can be hard, and the technicians have gotten lost a few times," Martin laughs.

"This summer is going to be even more exciting," he said "we keep getting more and more clients. As we tell our customers, why settle for second when you can have 1st choice?"

Step Up for a Slow Pitch Tournament

HKPR Invites Local Business Members to Participate in Round Robin

The Haliburton Kawartha Pine Ridge District Health Unit (HKPR) is asking local businesses to "step up to the plate" for the Workplace Slow Pitch Fun Challenge.

A round robin tournament will start in June with a maximum of three games, played one night through the week, during the month. The premise for the Slow Pitch Challenge is to promote physical activity, team morale and community awareness.

The tournament finals will be held in September and the number of games will depend upon team placing.

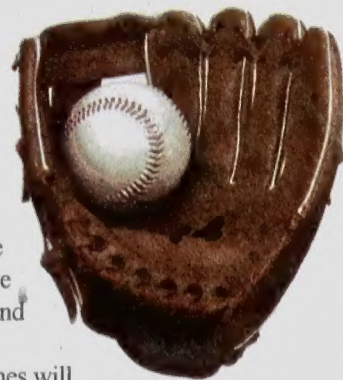

Teams can be made up of employees of a business; the media, BIA members, publishing/printers and health care, or you can make up a team using a combination of workplaces.

The teams will play at local available fields depending upon availability with little to no cost. Registered teams will be charged a minimal $30 to cover any costs incurred and at the end of the tournament any monies remaining would be given to a local charity to be randomly drawn.

Teams should have a minimum of nine players. Players may be substituted as needed. Please bring your own equipment.

The deadline to register is on Sunday, May 31.

If you would like to register a team please contact Lesley Tusch-Lumley at 705 457-1391 ext. 242 or email ltusch@haliburton.hkpr.on.ca.

The Scott Woods Band

Old Time Country and Fiddle Music Concert on Thursday, June 11

"Upbeat" and "Uplifting". These two words could well describe The Scott Woods Show coming to Archie Stouffer Elementary School (ASES) on Thursday, June 11, 7:30 p.m. This fiddle extravaganza is presented by the Minden United Church.

The "Stay Tuned" show is a fast-paced musical journey back in time – to when the variety television and radio shows ruled the airways. Canadian Fiddle Champion Scott Woods and his band perform traditional country, gospel and swing music with fancy fiddling, step dancing and a generous dose of humour.

Scott Woods studied classical violin from the age of four. He also plays several other instruments, but his favourite is the fiddle. Two-time winner of the Canadian Open Fiddle Contest, two-time winner of the Canadian Grand Masters Fiddling Championships, and the Canadian Fiddle Entertainer of the Year in 1999, are perhaps Scott's most-prized titles.

However, he has won competitions and performed throughout Canada, the United States and Europe. Scott can turn somersaults and step dance while playing the fiddle. For seven years, Scott was the musical director, and played the part of Don Messer in Memories of Don Messer's Jubilee, a tribute show which toured extensively in Canada.

The Scott Woods Show has played to sell out audiences wherever it is booked. Scott combines his superb playing ability with a wonderful sense of humour, along with the talented musicians who join him on stage. It is truly a show to be enjoyed.

Get your tickets now because they are sure to fly fast. Tickets are available at Minden Pharmasave, located at 110 Bobcaygeon Rd. in Minden, and Kitchens Etcetera at 183 Highland St. in Haliburton.

Tickets are $20 for adults, $10 for children ages 5-12, and children five and under are free. For further information call 705 457-1424.

Get Your Sneakers Out and Walk for Cancer

Relay for Life Brings Loved Ones and Friends Together

The Canadian Cancer Society Relay For Life is more than just a fundraiser.

It is an opportunity to get together with family and friends and celebrate cancer survivors, remember loved ones lost to cancer, and fight back in the hope of finding a cure for this terrible disease.

Relay is fun, fulfilling, and your participation gives strength to the Canadian Cancer Society's mission to eradicate cancer. Come out and walk in this inspirational 12-hour overnight event and unite with others to help fight to make cancer history.

This year's walk in Haliburton will take place at the high school from Friday, June 12 – Saturday, June 13 between 7 p.m. – 7 a.m.

At last year's walk there was involvement from schools, the media, businesses and many individuals. Relay For Life in Haliburton had over 700 participants, as well as 120 volunteers who assisted at the event. In addition, over 180 cancer survivors took part in the opening Survivors' Victory Lap, which is a celebration of their courage and strength.

At dusk, loved ones touched by cancer were honoured and remembered during the luminary ceremony. All night long, 1,248 luminaries lit the track, reminding us of the reasons for this inspiring event. Together, 69 teams strong, fought back against a disease that touches too many.

The Canadian Cancer Society had hoped to raise $150,000.00 through this event. But, the little community with a big heart far surpassed this objective and rose over $190,000.00! This year the steering committee hopes to see this event's three year accumulative total hit the half a million dollar mark!

Funds raised from last year's event were allocated to research, as well as supporting local community programs and services. In 2007, the Canadian Cancer Society's Haliburton and Minden transportation programs allowed 25 volunteer drivers to provide free transportation to 105 individuals receiving treatment for cancer, travelling over 224,582 kilometres. This is just one example of many that illustrates how the success of Relay For Life will continue to benefit the members of local communities.

For information or to get signed up for this event email peterborough@ontario.cancer.ca or call 705 742-3823 or 1 800-463-0432.

Cancer Statistics in Canada

In 2009, an estimated 171,000 new cases of cancer and 75,300 deaths from cancer will occur in Canada. This presents an increase of 4,600 newly diagnosed cases and 1,500 deaths compared to 2008.

More men than women will be diagnosed with a new cancer (52.2 per cent versus 47.8 per cent) and die from cancer (52.6 per cent and 47.4 per cent). In addition 75,100 new cases and 270 deaths from non-melanoma skin cancers are expected in 2009.

New Name, Same Great Variety of Healthy Choices

Organic Times Recently Opened to Replace The Storeroom in Minden

By Mark Arike

For many years, people have gotten used to shopping at The Storeroom for all of their natural foods and health product needs. Now, if you are in Minden, you'll notice that The Storeroom no longer around.

But don't worry, because the new store, known as Organic Times, is right next-door at 134 Bobcaygeon Rd (just over the bridge). Deborah Lyons is still the owner and the great selections of products you've come to know and love are still around. However, now you'll find the store is twice the size of the old one, which means more room for new products in the future.

Seven years ago, Lyons first purchased The Storeroom building from the original owner Wayne Henderson. Lyons says that she was fortunate to take it over the business from Henderson because he had established a good rapport with those in the community.

"He built up a really good business here in Minden, so I was lucky to take it over," said Lyons in an interview.

Before moving to Minden in 2001, Lyons lived in Toronto and worked for the school board as a special needs assistant. She also ran a homecare business while living in the city. She decided to move into the area after marrying a long-time local resident.

And ever since Lyons took over the old store, she says that the business has kept her busy.

"It's always been a very busy store," she explained, "I think that is because it's so well established. I also think that health is one of people's main concerns right now in today's day and age."

Even with the ongoing recession, Lyons says that the health food industry continues to grow.

"Health tends to be what a lot of people are focusing on...our business right now is up," she said.

After operating The Storeroom next-door for seven years, Lyons decided that it was time for a change.

"The store was small (1,100 square-feet) and we were outgrowing that space," she said. The new store has 3,000-square-feet of space, 500-square-feet of which is being used as additional store space for products.

"That will continue to allow me to add new products and I've been able to put in a bulk foods section," said Lyons, who had a "soft-opening" at Organic Times on April 22.

Where did Lyons come up with the Organic Times name? Well, the building she is in now was occupied by The Minden Times newspaper. Lyons thought it would be fitting to incorporate the "Times" name into her business.

"Everyone in Minden calls this building 'The Times' building. I changed the name because it was time and I wanted to incorporate The Times into the name," she explained, pointing out that her business logo (in The Times part) uses the same font and colour as the newspaper did years ago.

At Organic Times, the focus is on "clean eating" so a lot of the food available is organic.

"I have organic juices, cereals, crackers, bread, milk, grains and more,"

Lyons pointed out.

Vitamins are popular at the health food store, but some of the other products you'll also find include herbs, health-related books, hormone-free beef, natural pet foods and winemaking kits and a gluten-free section.

In the new, clean bulk foods area you'll discover about 120 different products to choose from. Chocolates, nuts, dried fruits, beans and rice are a sample of the products that you'll find in the bins. With the dispensing system in place for the bulk-foods section, products in bins won't get dirty because the customer fills their bag by simply pulling a handle to release the product.

And since Lyons has space in the store for more health food items, she's listening to customer requests on what new items could be added.

"If something is requested by customers over and over again, I'll bring it in to the store," she said.

Right now, there are a couple of locally produced products in the store, such as maple syrup and a selection of soaps. Down the road, Lyons plans to sell locally grown produce.

Including Lyons, five people work at Organic Times and each is knowledgeable about health food products that are carried in the store.

"A few of us take courses. I went on a nutritional product advisor course and I go to yearly seminars," said Lyons.

So what has the reaction been like from customers on the new store?

"The reaction to the new store has been overwhelming. I think it has been a very accepted change. People have been looking forward to a change; they've wanted a change. There are some people who I used to see only once a month, but now they come in once a week," said Lyons.

In the store there is also room for presentations to be made by health experts and soon a television with DVD player will play health-related videos while customers shop.

At the end of June, Lyons will host a grand opening for Organic Times.

So drop by the new store to find all of the products mentioned herein and more. The store is well lit, spacious, clean and the staff is extremely customer-friendly.

Organic Times is open on Monday - Wednesday (9:30 a.m. - 5 p.m.), Thursday and Friday (9:30 a.m. - 7 p.m.) and Saturday (9:30 a.m. - 5 p.m.). The store is closed on Sunday's.

Go Green Tip:

Take a bicycle ride.

Get a basket for your bike or carry a backpack and utilize shops close to home. If you live too far to bike, make sure you combine errands. Plot destinations to minimize driving time.

"I keep a small tub next to the kitchen sink. I catch water in it when rinsing veggies and then use that water in the garden. Nothing is wasted." -- I.L. in Mississippi

"My fave kitchen utensil is a pizza cutter. You can use it to cut sandwiches as well as pizza. You also can use it when you are chopping veggies, like peppers, onions, tomatoes, etc. Cut them into strips and then run the pizza cutter over them to dice. I find new uses for it all the time." -- E.G. in Oregon

"My daughters love stuffed animals, but they don't play with them all the time and keep them up on a shelf (they aren't ready to let go just yet). We throw them in the clothes dryer every so often to shake the dust off of them, and we can do a lot at a time." -- T. in New York

For a fun outdoor art activity, try painting with shaving cream. Fill several cups with a dollop of shaving cream and add a drop or two of food coloring to each. Stir and enjoy. It's easy and cheap, plus it cleans up with a garden hose.

REV UP FOR GOOD CAUSE

- Haliburton County Residents Encouraged to Park Their Cars During Commuter Challenge -

No need to rev your car engine, when you can make a new sound on your way to work with a bit of walk and roll.

That's the purpose of the second-annual Commuter Challenge in Haliburton County, which takes place from May 31 to June 6. Local residents and their workplaces are being asked to find 'active' and environmentally-friendly ways to get to work such as cycling, walking, jogging, or sharing rides.

"Think outside four wheels by leaving your car parked in the driveway during the first full week of June," says Sue Shikaze, a Health Promoter with the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit. "By taking part in the Commuter Challenge, you will be helping yourself and the planet."

The Health Unit, Haliburton Highlands Cycling Coalition and County of Haliburton are teaming up to organize this year's Commuter Challenge. According to Shikaze, walking and cycling, even part of the way to work, is good for the environment and helps people reach their recommended 30 minutes of daily physical activity. There is an added bonus as well, she says, noting: "Walking and cycling are fun, and good for business. Active employees tend to be less stressed and more productive."

Individuals and workplaces in Haliburton County can register for the Commuter Challenge by May 25 to be eligible for great prizes. A Commuter Challenge package will be sent to participating individuals and workplaces, including posters, tracking forms and copies of the brand-new Active Commuting Guide. To register, call Melanie Scheffee at (705) 457-1391, ext. 245, or e-mail her at mscheffee@haliburton.hkpr.on.ca.

The Commuter Challenge is a nation-wide competition between Canadian communities to encourage the use of sustainable modes of transportation to get to and from work, school or errands. In 2008, nearly 32,000 Canadians took up the challenge in more than 168 communities, including Vancouver, Calgary, Kingston, Montreal, Edmonton, and Ottawa.

In a place as geographically spread out as Haliburton County, Shikaze says there are ways people can take up the challenge. "Consider finding a place to park your vehicle a few kilometres from work, then cycle the rest of the way," she suggests. "For commuters who live closer to the job, trade in your car for a pair of running shoes and walk to work." □

Russian burglars use walkie talkies

A band of burglars in Russia decided to use walkie talkies to pull off their best heist ever. The radios, they figured, would allow them to monitor the police as well as coordinate their own activities. It never occurred to the mental athletes that the police might be listening in. They were.

Crook caught by victim's husband

A man in Ravenna, Ohio broke into a church and stole some items from the office of the church secretary. His vehicle got stuck in the snow during the getaway and attracted the attention of a passing police car. Unfortunately for the thief, the state trooper who came to his aid was the husband of the church secretary. The trooper noticed some of his wife's belongings on the back seat of the stranded motorist's car. Case closed.

Ghost Stories

Scary Tales

Penkaet Castle

Another classical haunting is that of Penkaet a 17th century Castle in Scotland.

Footsteps, rattling's, mysterious apparitions standing by fireplaces. The obligatory family murder. There is a legend that a former owner John Cockburn killed his relative John Seton. On July 29th 1946 public attention was drawn to the 'entity' that had disturbed a party of young people.

Furniture has been seen to move, beds unmaking themselves.

Water taps running.

Doors opening and closing, cold spots, quests having a feeling of being watched or never being alone. Most spectacular of all was a glass dome that protected a model of the house in the library. The dome was a bout 2 feet high, and stood on an oval base about 20 inches long. Suddenly, for no apparent reason, and with no one anywhere near it, the glass dome shattered. Could this have been a hint from 'John Cockburn' that he was getting a bit tired of so many visitors?

Scientifically Speaking

What When Where Why How

On a Hot Day, Why Does A Long Asphalt Road Look Like it Has Water On it?

You might find it hard to believe, but that puddle of water down the road is really a reflection of the sky. What is it reflected by? The road?

No, by a 'mirror' formed by bent rays of light. Light waves travel faster through cooler air. When light rays from the sky reach the hot air rising off a hot black road, they bend. At the point where they bend, the light rays act like a mirror reflecting an image of the sky. The image is known as a mirage. And sometimes, a mirage can be upside down. For example, at sea the layers of air near the water can focus light waves from a ship into an upside-down image in the sky. So if you see an upside-down ship on the horizon, don't call the coast guard. It's merely a mirage.

Crime Flashback

by Max Haines

In 1873, citizens of Maine took the law into their own hands to deal with Big Jim Cullen

When we think of the rather vile practice of lynching, we are inclined to picture racially instigated necktie parties committed by mobs in the southern U.S.

But alas, there have been occasions when citizens dwelling in more northern climes have taken rope in hand to see justice of a sort was meted out without benefit of judge or jury.

In the entire history of the state of Maine, there has been only one lynching. Big Jim Cullen lived in Ball's Mill, not far from Presque Isle, Maine and just across the international border from New Brunswick.

Northern Frontier Justice

Big Jim, who towered well over six feet, was a rough tough guy, best left to his own devices. Back in 1873, the good folks of northern Maine gave him a wide berth.

On April 28, someone broke into Dudley's General Store in Ball's Mill. A pair of boots were taken.

Because of the size of the boots, Dudley immediately suspected Jim Cullen. Cullen had huge feet and was the only one around the town who could wear such large boots.

Dudley noted the thief had gained entry to his store through a window. Outside the window were footprints made by the new boots in the freshly fallen snow.

Deputy Sheriff Granville Hayden was summoned from Presque Isle. He took one look at the footprints and he, too, realized they could only have been made by big Jim Cullen.

The footprints led into the woods toward Swanback's Shingle Mill in Chapman Plantation, a good five-hour hike, made more difficult by the heavy snow.

Hayden needed help. He mustered a crowd in front of Dudley's store and asked for volunteers to track down the thief.

Hardworking farmers and lumberjacks looked away. No one with all his marbles wanted to take off after a man as tough and mean-tempered as Big Jim Cullen.

After all, he had only taken a pair of boots.

Out of the crowd, just two men, Bill Hubbard and Minot Bird, volunteered to join the Deputy Sheriff. Off the three men went, snowshoes crunching the heavy snow under foot.

Late in the afternoon the men approached Swanback's Mill.

Like most men living alone, Swanback was pleased to have company.

"C'mon in and sup with us. Jim just got here a while ago."

Hayden entered the room cautiously and inquired of Cullen where he was headed. Big Jim candidly told Hayden he had gotten into a little trouble and was moving on for a little while.

Hayden said no more and all five men enjoyed a hearty meal in front of the fireplace. After supper, Hayden motioned to Cullen that he wanted to chat with him outside.

The cold northern Maine wind whistled through the trees as Hayden advised Big Jim he had a warrant for his arrest for stealing those boots from Dudley's store. Hayden went on to explain he realized it wasn't the biggest crime in the world.

He had no great desire to see Cullen in jail, but he wanted his territory to be free of thievery. He offered a deal. As long as Cullen would keep going across the line into Canada and never return, he wouldn't be arrested or pursued. Next morning, he would be free to take off.

Hayden, believing he had acted fairly, went back into the cabin and went to bed beside Bill Hubbard.

Big Jim came in out of the cold. A cot had been set up for him near the bunk. Jim sat there, staring into the fire. Hayden's deal didn't sit well with him.

He had been born in Florenceville, N.B., and had a few minor charges facing him if he re-entered Canada.

Besides, he lived with a woman named Twist back near Ball's Mill. He didn't feel like leaving her forever.

No, sir, Hayden's deal didn't sit well with Cullen at all.

Toward morning, Big Jim had worked himself into a frenzy.

He was wide awake when he resolved how to extricate himself from his predicament.

The four men were sleeping peacefully when Jim picked up an axe from its resting place in a corner of the cabin. Mustering all his strength, he brought the axe down on Hubbard's head.

The blow split the man's skull in two. Hayden rubbed the sleep from his eyes and stared at Big Jim swinging the axe. The twin-edged blade plunged into his head, killing him instantly.

Swanback and Bird woke up to see Big Jim advancing toward them.

Swanback sprang out the door barely in front of the axe, which just missed his head.

The axe smashed into the door, knocking it loose from its hinges. Poor Minot Bird sat up, speechless and terrified.

He looked into the crazed eyes of Big Jim, still holding on to that fearful axe.

Cullen glared back at the frightened man. Finally, he shouted, "Go get Swanback. Bring in some wood from outside. We'll burn the place down. I'll let you both go if you never tell what happened here."

Bird and Swanback did as he commanded and lugged in wood, piling it high around and on top of the two dead men.

Cullen sprinkled kerosene over the bodies and ignited what amounted to a funeral pyre.

Once outside, Swanback and Bird were convinced Cullen was about to kill them. Now that they had boots and clothing, they took off for Ball's Mill, certain Cullen would be following closely behind.

The desperate pair knocked on Andrew Judkins' door and blurted out their wild story. Judkins had his wife wake up neighbours, who quickly gathered at his home. Fearing an attack by Cullen, they surrounded the house.

Big Jim was only minutes behind his quarry.

When he emerged from the woods and saw the chain of lanterns surrounding Judkins' house, he correctly guessed the men he was after were being guarded by the community.

Big Jim scowled and left for his own home and his woman. Meanwhile, a small group of men set off for Swanback's to verify that a double murder had taken place.

They returned with a shoebox containing charred bones, all that was left of Hayden and Hubbard.

The townsfolk were infuriated. They decided to proceed en masse to Cullen's home.

Once there they shouted for Big Jim to come out, but it his woman who responded, "I haven't seen him for two days."

When the mob convinced her they would burn down the house with Cullen inside, out came Big Jim.

The captured fugitive was taken to Dudley's store, surrounded by 50 angry men.

He was tied to a beam and all that day the citizens peered in to see the man who had killed two of their number.

Big Jim didn't mind talking about the murders.

He admitted killing the two men and displayed no remorse for what he had done. In fact he spit out, "I'm sorry I didn't kill the others, too."

Men, never identified, scurried from house to house. Occupants nodded yes, they would be there.

Everyone knew Cullen had to be transferred from the makeshift jail to a real lockup in Presque Isle. Guarded by six constables, the entourage started off by sleigh.

A group of 150 men, many of them wearing hoods, intercepted the sleigh before it had travelled a mile. Cullen was removed and dragged into the woods.

A rope was thrown over a low-hanging branch of a maple tree. Thirty minutes later, the mob was gone.

Only Big Jim Cullen was there, gently swaying in the breeze.

Later a Coroner's Inquest stated Cullen had come to his death "by some party or parties to the jurors unknown."

No one has ever been tried or convicted of lynching Big Jim Cullen.

Crazy But True Law Suits

A Little Too Much Booty

Meredith Berkman, seeking $50 million, filed one of the first anti-fat lawsuits against the manufacturer of a snack food named Pirate's Booty. It looks like eating too much Pirate's Booty had added too much booty to Ms. Berkman's booty.

In December, 2001, the Good Housekeeping Institute tested Pirate's Booty, which is basically flavored puffed rice, and found that it contained 147 calories and 8.5 grams of fat, while its label said it contained only 120 calories and 2.5 grams of fat.

The manufacturer, Robert's American Gourmet Foods (a subsidiary of Keystone Foods), blamed the problem on a change in its manufacturing process and immediately recalled the product from store shelves.

Nearly four months after the recall, Berkman filed a $50 million class-action lawsuit against Robert's Foods, claiming "emotional distress" and "weight gain...mental anguish, outrage and indignation." The complaint claims to represent all consumers who ruined their diets and had to spend more time at the gym because they ate mislabeled Pirate's Booty.

150 Bike Tour Has Ride Lengths Suitable for All Ages and Abilities

This year, the town of Minden is celebrating its 150th Birthday, or Sesquicentennial Anniversary, as you might have heard it being called.

As a way of supporting this rare, monumental event, the Minden Sesquicentennial Committee, the Haliburton Highlands Cycling Coalition and the Haliburton Real Easy Ryders will be hosting the Minden 150 Bike Tour on Saturday, August 15.

Penny Obee, Chair of the Minden 150 Bike Tour, says that not only will the ride be used to celebrate Minden's Birthday it will also help promote healthy lifestyles among those of all ages in the county.

"I think it's a real exciting new venture," said Obee. "This provides an easy, gentle way for cyclists of all ages and abilities to get in some pleasurable exercise in the county."

Obee says that a number of volunteers have stepped up to volunteer for the event. Now it's time for riders to start signing up.

"We're hoping for a large group," she said, adding that the goal is to turn this into an annual event.

"If families are going out on one of the rides, they could turn around midway and make it their own," said Obee.

The start time for the 150 km ride is scheduled for 8 - 9 a.m.; the 70 km ride will begin between 9 - 10 a.m.; and the 30 km ride will head out from 10 - 11 a.m.

If this is you: The only thing you can recall more quickly than your phone number is your bank balance. You know your budget and you stick to it. You understand that borrowing is an important and useful tool if it is managed carefully. You have goals for the future and a plan to get there. Saving is a top priority for you. You beef up your RRSP before you splurge on a cute pair of shoes or a cool gadget for your car. Tip: Remember that it's OK to splurge now and then! Being financially smart in taking care of the future doesn't mean you can't have some things that keep you happy today.

Type B: Sometimes Savvy, Sometimes Super Shopper

If this is you: You approach financial issues like a restaurant menu. A little voice tells you that you should have the 'side salad' instead of the 'baked potato with sour cream.' Sometimes you listen, sometimes you don't. You often know what you should be doing with your finances, and at times you are quite disciplined about budgeting and saving. But you can also let it slide when the call of the mall becomes too strong.

You have some idea of your costs, and know how much money you should be setting aside for any big, upcoming expenses, such as a wedding or a first house.

Tip: You should write out a manageable budget and find a way to stick to it. The trick for you will be identifying the things that have knocked you off course in the past and develop a strong plan, like setting aside a certain amount of fun money each week to save towards the splurge items.

Type C: "The next round's on me!"

If this is you:

- You don't spend much time planning your finances. Tax-efficient investing, portfolio diversification, asset allocation - all incredibly boring topics to you; they just get in the way of more important subjects that occupy your day.
- Your budgeting plan doesn't go beyond the next one or two pay-cheques.
- You've felt the pinch of debt, most likely to do with your credit cards.
- You have likely never maximized your RRSP contribution.

Tip: You need to take a careful look at your finances and develop a long-term budget. Reviewing your plan with a financial adviser can help. Having never stuck to a budget in the past, you will need to work hard at developing some discipline. It would likely be a wise move to set up automatic withdrawals (weekly or monthly) for your savings to make it easier to stick with your plan.

What's next?

Not surprising, most couples have slightly different views on life, and money is no different. You don't HAVE to have the same money style as your spouse. But, it's important to recognize the differences and find an approach that works for you.

Using a financial adviser can be helpful for couples, no matter what your money styles. Money is an emotional issue and an adviser can offer a neutral viewpoint based on financial expertise - not family politics.

If you already have an adviser and have taken steps to discuss your future finances, good for you! Our website has lots of resources to help you learn more about investing. Best wishes for a long and happy future together!

A law in Santa Ana, California makes it illegal for a person to swim on dry land!

In 1986, California District Judge Samuel King issued an order for it to stop raining. The state endured five years of drought until the day in 1991 when he rescinded the motion!

Lange on the Law

Donald Lange

Promissory Notes

Promissory notes are written statements that a person owes money to another person at a certain interest rate. They are often lending documents made on demand and called demand promissory notes. Lawyers use them in estate planning or when there are loans among family members. In these situations, no payments of interest or principal may occur for many years. Lawyers were shaking in their boots in 2006 when the Ontario Court of Appeal came down with a decision on demand promissory notes not to their liking. Our highest provincial court held that the limitation period for demand promissory notes begins to run as soon as the note is issued and not following a default after a demand for payment. A limitation period simply means that you must launch your lawsuit within a certain period of time or you are barred from doing so by the passage of time. What this meant for lawyers preparing demand promissory notes for their clients was that notes issued after January 1, 2004, when the basic limitation period was changed from six years to two years, were barred two years after issuance unless there had been payments or a written acknowledgment of the debt.

As a result of the appellate decision and its impact on lawyers, fierce lobbying occurred with the province, including lobbying from the Ontario Bar Association, to change the Limitation Act about demand promissory notes. Just 18 months after the 2006 decision, the government passed legislation retroactively changing the law that our appeal court had made. The amendment to the legislation states that the time starts to run for the limitation period from "the first day on which there is a failure to perform the obligation, once a demand for the performance is made." In other words, time starts to run, not when the demand promissory note is issued, but when there is a default following a demand for payment. For some reason, the retroactive effect of the amendment only goes back to January 1, 2004 when the new Limitation Period was passed. The amendment saves lawyers from lawsuits because the legislation takes the unusual step of reaching into the past and declaring the law to be different from what it was. But is it fair to the borrowers who were freed by the Ontario Court of Appeal?

In the next column, I will be talking about wills.

Sinuuous

\sin-ye-wes\ adj 1a: of a serpentine or wavy form: winding b: marked by strong lithe movements 2: intricate, complex

While flying over the Midwest, I saw a long, sinuous river winding through fields, farms and towns.

Mulligan Club Card Will Save You Big On Games at Premier Courses

By Mark Arike

Are you one of those people who enjoys the sport of golf but aren't as serious about it as the professionals? Do you find that the cost of playing limits you on how often you can go out? Well, have no fear; The Mulligan Club is here.

With this new business, spearheaded by marketing expert Wayne Greer of Minden, those who go out for the occasional game of golf can get great deals on their games at a selection of golf courses. For just $25 you get The Mulligan Club Card, which has an actual value of $247. With the card you get two for one golf prices at four courses.

The current card features the Whitetail Golf and Country Club, Wolf Run Golf Club, Baxter Creek Golf Club and Oliver's Nest. As an added bonus, Whitetail Golf and Country Club is offering two additional two for one rounds at their course. Add it all up and your getting 12 rounds of golf for the price of six!

These fantastic courses are all in the Kawartha's, but a future card will include courses from the Highlands.

Greer has a lengthy resume in the sales and marketing industry. In the past, he has worked at Patient News Publishing, Corus Entertainment and for various colleges in Ontario. He recently started his own company called Ting! Marketing and he launched The Mulligan Club in September of last year. In an interview Greer explained how The Mulligan Club came to be.

"I publish a golf magazine for the area called On the Links," said Greer. "After networking with golfers and the golf courses last year, I decided to go ahead with launching this business."

Greer says that because of the rainy season last year and the state of the economy, he developed a desire to help people save money while out on the links.

Play Better Golf with JACK NICKLAUS

I'LL TEXAS WEDGE A SHOT FROM JUST OFF THE GREEN — PUTT THE BALL INSTEAD OF CHIPPING OR PITCHING IT — ANY TIME CONDITIONS ALLOW. THESE ARE GENERALLY IDEAL WHEN THE TURF IS FIRM AND DRY AND FAIRLY EVEN.

TO PLAY THIS SHOT, USE YOUR NORMAL PUTTING TECHNIQUE BUT HIT A LITTLE HARDER THAN YOU NORMALLY WOULD. AND KEEP YOUR HEAD AND BODY STILL — THERE'S A GREAT TEMPTATION ON THIS KIND OF STROKE TO "PEEK" TOO EARLY. YOU'LL FIND THIS SHOT PARTICULARLY VALUABLE FROM A THIN LIE.

On The Mulligan Club web site, Greer admits that he isn't the greatest golfer around. He knows what it's like to play the game for just the fun of it and he encourages others to have a good time and Mulligan Club cont'd.... pg. 33...

You Don't Need to Be a Pro to Take Advantage of These Deals

... from pg. 32

not take the game too seriously.

"I'm not a "serious" golfer, this I'm sure you can tell. I fancy the course for a good time and to socialize with my friends...that is all.

We're taking a fun approach to game and we hope you enjoy the unique qualities we have to offer," he says on the web site.

As an added incentive to get the card now, those who purchase one of the first 576 Mulligan Club cards available will have a chance to win a 2009 Mitsubishi (the official Mulligan Club car). Mulligan Club membership gives you one ball and one swing at the Members Only Hole-In-One challenge. Simply bring your membership card to the event that day, and if you ace the hold, you win the car!

"We'll hold an event at each one of the sponsor courses where 144 card holders can take a shot at winning the car," said Greer.

The great thing about the card is that it comes with no restrictions. You can use it at the courses on weekdays, weekends and during peak times. You just bring the club card with you and the course employees initial the back when you arrive.

You can also join the Mulligan Club for free online, which entitles you to other deals at courses that are sent out via email.

Greer says that the response from the courses and people who have bought the card has been extremely positive.

"It's bringing in new traffic to the courses," explained Greer. "And even if a person uses the card just once, they've gotten their money's worth."

Not only will the card help golfers of all ages and abilities save money, a portion of proceeds will go to benefit charitable organizations.

"For instance, if a charity golf event is being held and they allow us to set-up and sell the cards, we'll donate 40 per cent of the day's sales to that charity," explained Greer.

Because Greer isn't running this business alone, he'd like to acknowledge those have helped him and continue to support him now. His partner Lianna Hardy, brother Derek and his wife Janene are all involved in the promotion of The Mulligan Club.

This Saturday night at 10 p.m. (May 30), Greer and his Mulligan Club team will be at the Rockcliffe Tavern in Minden for a Maxim Golf event.

Strange But True

It was Clay Ewing, president of a community bank in Indiana, who recently made the following sage observation: "Banking should not be exciting. If banking is exciting, there is something wrong with it."

James Arness, star of the iconic American TV series "Gunsmoke," was more than six and a half feet tall -- so tall, in fact, that the makers of the show frequently had him stand in a hole during his scenes so he wouldn't tower over his co-stars.

The form-fitting synthetic fabric commonly known as spandex was so named because it's an anagram of "expands."

When you think of a dog herding cattle or sheep, the image in your mind is probably a border collie, a breed well-known for its herding capabilities. You might be surprised to learn that Dalmations, too, were once used to herd livestock. In fact, that's why they've become an icon of firefighters everywhere. Back when fire engines were actually wagons drawn by teams of horses, Dalmations accompanied the firefighters to the scene of a disaster in order to herd the horses to a safe place until the blaze was brought under control.

Recorders of crime statistics say that the top three cities in the United States in terms of cars being stolen are Modesto, Calif.; Las Vegas; and San Diego.

If, like many Americans these days, you're carrying around some extra weight, here's an added incentive to lose those love handles: For every 50 pounds your car loses from its payload, you'll get about a 1 percent improvement in gas mileage. Of course, you could just clean out any junk that's been cluttering up the trunk instead.

Thought for the Day: "Like cars in amusement parks, our direction is often determined through collisions." -- Yahia Lababidi
